

MOTHER YEARS TO TEND EUGENIA

Horseback Accident to Mrs. Al Davis May Bring Reconciliation.

SON-IN-LAW FAILS TO NOTIFY MRS. KELLY

Girl Thrown from Hunter, Is Found Unconscious in Road. Her Skull Fractured.

"I would go to her this minute and care for her, but I am all alone, and despite every effort I have made to get in communication with my lawyer and friends and seek their advice, I have been unable to do so."

Mrs. Helen M. Kelly made this reply last night when asked if she had heard of the accident to her daughter, Mrs. Eugenia Kelly-Davis, whose condition as the result of being thrown from her horse earlier in the day was reported to be serious. Late last night it was said Mrs. Davis suffered a fracture of the skull.

Mrs. Kelly was at her home, 116 East Sixty-third Street, when asked if she had heard of the accident. It is the same home in which mother and daughter lived up to the time Eugenia met Al Davis, a professional dancer. His charm for the young girl was stronger than a motherly influence.

May Bring Reconciliation.

From the action and tone of Mrs. Kelly's remarks, there was every reason to believe that the mishap may bring about a reconciliation between mother and daughter, if the latter recovers.

When asked if this was probable, the parent said: "I am at present distracted, and really do not know how to answer this question."

What I am more concerned over than anything else is my poor child's condition. Oh, it is a shameful state of affairs! Just realize how terrible it is to permit that poor, weak girl—you know, Eugenia is not a physically strong girl—to go out horseback riding on a spirited horse.

"As soon as I heard of the dreadful accident I called up the doctor who's name was mentioned in the newspaper in which I read of the accident, which was Dr. W. J. Malcolm, of Jericho, who had called him regarding my dear daughter. He told me that, while he considered

Warden Kirchwey's Daughter Made a Bride by Contract

Barnard Militant Who Led "Barbarians" Attack on Sororities Is Wife of Princeton Man.

Miss Freda Kirchwey, daughter of Dr. George W. Kirchwey, warden of Sing Sing prison, who was regarded as the most militant young woman at Barnard College, from which she was graduated with the class of '15, has carried her militancy into private life.

Papers filed in the County Clerk's office yesterday show that Miss Kirchwey on November 9 last became the contract wife of Evans Clark, of Princeton, N. J. Instead of the usual ceremony the couple were wedded by the signing of a contract, in which they took each other for husband and wife, as if the marriage had been performed "in facie ecclesie." Dr. Kirchwey was one of the witnesses to the contract, the signatures being attested yesterday by Justice Greenbaum, of the Supreme Court.

Contract marriages, which long have been the custom in some European countries (and from time to time such contracts are filed here) are as binding in law as a religious ceremony.

Mrs. Clark has taken a great interest in the work of her father in Sing Sing and is an honorary member of the Mutual Welfare League. So are her mother and her sister, Miss Dorothy Browning Kirchwey, whose engagement to H. La Rue Brown, of Boston, was announced last October.

Residing as being known as the most popular and most militant girl at Barnard, the former Miss Kirchwey was also called "the best looking." She led the "barbarians" in the attack on sororities while at college, with the result that the faculty forbade these organizations to initiate any new members for three years. "Fraternities are wrong basically," said Miss Kirchwey. "They are undemocratic and foolishly secret and exclusive."

About three years ago Miss Kirchwey was in charge of several Barnard students who acted as pickets in a strike of garment workers.

FIERY VODKA TOLD TO GO TO MARS

Red Noses Fail to Save Russian Crime Brew at Trial by Jury.

Vodka, exile from Russia, received no hospitality in the Land of the Free last night, for Russians of New York assembled in the Labor Temple, and there tried the liquor for every crime on its calendar.

After several hours of debate the jury brought in a verdict of guilty, and vodka was sentenced to further banishment this time to Mars.

The trial was conducted after the precedent laid down by Russian law.

Ivan Okunstoff, counsel for vodka, made a lengthy address in Russian, as dery as his client, Elias Dourachkin, the district attorney, accused the prisoner at the bar represented by Bayle Vodrian, attired as Mephistopheles of all crimes on the calendar, from petty larceny to murder, and when the jury brought in a vote of 9 to 3 for complete annihilation, Sachar Sabachim, the judge, sentenced the criminal to exile to the offending planet Mars.

Jurors were chosen from the audience of Russians which packed the temple.

The jury debated only a little before the verdict was brought in. When, after the Russian custom, each man was asked to give his public vote upon the question, nine were for complete extinction. Two, with faintly tinged noses, were inclined to show mercy, and one with a highly colored proboscis and a bald head arose and announced that he believed vodka guiltless.

Despite his faith Judge Sabachim, sometime a professor in the University of Prague, sentenced the prisoner to a life term in Mars.

Thomas Hunt Talmadge, Jr., and William H. Long, all of New York;

Harold H. Giles, of Colorado Springs;

Howard B. Lee, of Detroit; and Donald Satterthwait, of Wilmington.

After a wedding journey Mr. and Mrs. Ketham will reside at Cedarhurst, Long Island.

WOMAN LASHES BROKER IN STREET

Horsewhips Him for Hay- ing Road Cut Across Her Land—Now Ill in Bed.

Tenafly, N. J., May 6.—Mrs. Julia Warden horsewhipped her neighbor, Mr. S. Mott, a banker, late this afternoon.

Late this afternoon, when Mr. Mott returned from New York, where he is connected with the Bankers' Trust Company, he was met by Mrs. Warden. She was armed with a horsewhip. Mott tried to ward off the blows and saved his face from injury.

Mott ran from the woman and hurried to the office of Recorder Maughan, of the Hudson Avenue police. McLaughlin came at the Wardens' residence this evening to serve the warrant charging Mrs. Warden with assault and battery.

Mrs. Warden said she was in bed suffering with nervous shock and that the physician had ordered that she not be disturbed.

The serving of the warrant was postponed until Monday evening.
